

As the COVID-19 pandemic continues to spread, healthcare professionals around the world are doing their best to handle the crisis. Physicians and nurses are working around the clock to quickly diagnose infections and treat affected patients, the medical community is working tirelessly to find a cure and the general public is trying to flatten the curve through social distancing.

Of course, the outbreak of the coronavirus has also affected CIRSE's plans for the coming months. Restrictions on travel and gatherings have made it impossible to hold our upcoming congresses as planned and we have had to postpone our spring meetings. Please find all relevant information here.

As a service to all those fighting the pandemic, CIRSE Publications department has collected some useful links on COVID-19, including guidelines, webinars and articles.

We hope that you find this information useful and will keep you updated on a regular basis. In the meantime, visit www.cirse.org for additional updates.

Tutto andrà bene. All will be well.
