Dear corporate partners,

Since its inception, Interventional Radiology (IR) has continually advanced modern medicine through a unique, cutting-edge technical approach.

As a result, it has grown immensely as a clinical specialty, providing treatments for a wide range of indications and pathologies. However, with this development comes the need to increase both the number of Interventional Radiologists (IRs) and the availability of IR services in hospitals.

One of CIRSE's top priorities for the coming years will therefore be to further establish and advance IR, ensuring improved patient access to the treatments it offers.

As the primary representative of IR in Europe and a strong advocate for IR globally, CIRSE is committed to maintaining its leadership of the IR community, remaining at the forefront of knowledge, technology and innovation. With this in mind, the CIRSE leadership introduced its Vision for IR in 2024:

Focus on Clinical Services and Patient Care

IRs should strive to be actively involved in patient management and care, including participation in multidisciplinary team (MDT) decision-making.

They should have access to the resources and infrastructure required to provide the highest quality clinical services to their patients. Workforce planning should also take into account the specific requirements of IR practice, in addition to diagnostic imaging.

Focus on Therapies and Treatment

IRs should aim to concentrate primarily on IR. Their involvement in diagnostic imaging should be centred on IR patients and consultations during MDTs. Purely diagnostic imaging services that are independent of IR practice should be minimised.

Focus on Training and Excellence in IR

IRs should be highly trained physicians, capable of mastering complex interventional therapies. Training in IR should include sufficient clinical exposure, enabling IRs to become the best possible physicians for their patients.

CIRSE's Vision for IR aims to support the growth of the clinical specialty by promoting structured and targeted IR education and training, empowering IRs to consistently operate at the highest level.

For CIRSE's mission to succeed, all stakeholders are invited to contribute their support in order to jointly advance interventional radiology.

Corporate membership is one of the opportunities available to manufacturers in the field to further strengthen their alliance with CIRSE's global community of healthcare providers. We look forward to working together with you, our corporate members, to continue building this shared vision for better patient care.

CIRSE's Corporate Partner Committee for the Advancement of IR (AIR)

Achieving the vision for Interventional Radiology is a challenging goal for CIRSE to accomplish alone. Strong alliances with our corporate partners are essential as we work together to build this vision. To foster and strengthen these alliances, a new committee was established in 2024: the CIRSE Corporate Partner Committee for the Advancement of IR (AIR).

The AIR Committee is composed of members of the CIRSE Executive Board, the CIRSE Events SPC Chairpersons, the CIRSE Online Education Committee Chairperson, the Chairpersons of our Endovascular Therapy and Oncology Alliance Subcommittees, as well as our Platinum Corporate Members.

We invite our Platinum Corporate Members to nominate two members of their senior leadership team to participate in this open, yet confidential, platform for strategic discussions on the advancement of IR and on improving access to IR care in Europe and globally.

The Committee meets in person once or twice a year, either as standalone meetings or in conjunction with major CIRSE events.

We look forward to shaping the future of Interventional Radiology together with you!
